Echoes from the Past

Old Infirmary – Old Guidance Building – New Development/Alumni Office

Between the years of 1988 and 1997, the old infirmary building was called Applehaus and was easily recognized by its red door and red and white curtains. Although the building continued as an infirmary for resident students and a first aid station for all, it also housed the special program for which it was named.

Applehaus was an acronym for the basic human needs as defined by William Glasser, an American psychiatrist who is the father of Reality Therapy and Control Theory. In the eighties and well into the nineties his work was a significant part in helping create at Saint Paul's an education and handling of young men that worked to help them make good choices in life and to be the ones in charge of their lives. He believed that to be happy and satisfied one must work to meet his basic needs.

In order to assist our students in learning appropriate ways to meet and balance their needs, counselors and administrators organized the Applehaus program whereby students were invited to sign up for support groups to help them deal with problem areas in their lives; for example, family issues, relaxation and meditation, relationship conflicts, faith issues, drugs and alcohol abuse, suicide issues, even “how to get a date” and table manners for the younger students. Support groups were then formed and students went to Applehaus at lunch time where they met with group leaders: psychologists, psychiatrists, specially trained parents and teachers. More than half the student body in any given year were participants.

The program also included drug and alcohol abuse prevention workshops for parents and suicide prevention workshops for all sophomores. Merle Dooley served as the director and volunteer parents assisted.

In January 2012, the Lasalle Hall renovation was completed and the Counseling Department moved into the area where they are located today. The old infirmary has sat vacant since then.

In the beginning of this year, the decision was made to renovate the building and move the Development/Alumni offices into it upon completion before the end of the school year.

School News

Saint Paul's recently had a very special and familiar guest on campus. On Tuesday, February 18, current Principal/President Brother Ray Buillard welcomed former Principal Brother Jeffrey Calligan, FSC back to Saint Paul's during an "all school" assembly. Brother Jeff served as the sixteenth Christian Brother principal of Saint Paul's School, and, during his tenure as principal, even hired Brother Ray as a senior counselor at that time. Brother Ray assured Brother Jeff that the school has done nothing but improve since he last set foot on campus and that the Lasallian traditions remain more alive than ever before.

Brother Jeff experienced firsthand exactly what Brother Ray meant. On Wednesday night, February 19, he attended the state championship ring ceremony for the 2013 State Champion Cross Country Wolves in the Our Lady of Peace Chapel. Head Coach Terryl Chatham along with moderator Myrle Wiggins distributed the rings to the champion Wolves as an eternal remembrance of victory and companionship.

Brother Jeff also had the opportunity to witness the Marching Wolves participate in the Mardi Gras festivities. The Marching Wolves, led by band moderator Andrew Moran, have had a busy parade schedule. They, along with the Golden Blues, marched in the Krewe of Eve, Olympia, and Carrollton for the weekend of February 21, 22, and 23. The following weekend the band and dance team marched in Hermes and Endymion on February 28 and March 1, and will march in today's parade, Bacchus.

Our school remains an athletic powerhouse just as it was years ago. Brother Jeff wished good luck to the Wrestling Wolves as they went off to compete in state competition on Friday and Saturday, February 21 and 22, at the Pontchartrain Center in Kenner. Number one seeded senior Tanner Leblanc leads the wolves as the team attempts to showcase its constant hard work and perseverance from the past eight months.

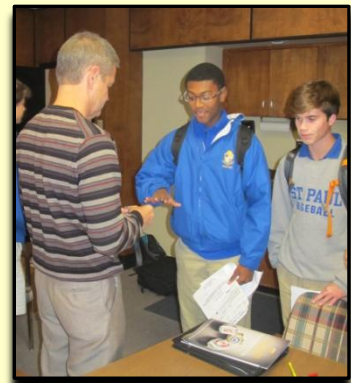

Brother Jeff was glad to hear that the academic standards have been raised to a whole new level. On Friday, February 7, Saint Paul's sent numerous Scientific Wolves to the Region VIII Science Fair held at the Southeastern Louisiana University. Besides the three first place, two second place, and one third place finishes, Saint Paul's earned an even better award. Sophomore Michael Seenappa garnered first place in the entire science fair with his Best in Show Award. Michael's project dealt with the growing amount of surveillance in our society. First place winners were Kenny Ross and Jonah Knickles, Microbiology, and George Cazenavette and Walden Perry, Computer Sciences; second place finishers were Benjamin Dantin, Engineering, and Leland van Deventer, Microbiology; and third place winner was Grant Fowler, Environmental Sciences.

St. Joseph's Day Altar

Faith

In celebration of the feast day of Saint Joseph on March 19, a very special parent of a Saint Paul's student puts on a Saint Joseph Altar annually. But the school started the Altar a few days early and celebrated Monday, March 10. Saint Joseph is the "patron and protector of the Institute of the Christian Brothers" and therefore holds a special place in the hearts of the community.

This altar, flowing with flowers, grains, fruits, vegetables, seafood, and sweets, pays homage to Saint Joseph in a unique way. The legend goes that during the Middle Ages a drought struck the island of Sicily. Famine and many other hardships railed the land. Fish died, rivers dried, and crops disappeared as the Sicilians desperately needed rain. The faithful people prayed to Saint Joseph that he would intercede to God for them, and the Sicilians promised that they would forever honor Saint Joseph if their petitions were granted. After days of deep prayer, God answered their cries for help. Rains began to fall, crops flourished, and fish filled the waters where there had been none. In his honor, they began to construct an altar every year in Saint Joseph's honor on his feast day. The Sicilians built the altar in three levels, representing the Holy Trinity.

Besides being an Italian tradition, the altar is also a New Orleans tradition and has made its way into the city of Covington, but more specifically and recently into Saint Paul's School. About sixteen years ago, Doctor Ann Kay Logarbo, mother of Class of 2013 Patrick Logarbo, Class of 2009 graduate Nick Logarbo, and Class of 2008 graduate Brian Logarbo, prayed to Saint Joseph as vehemently as the Sicilians of the Middle ages when illness struck her elder brother. When things seemed grimmest, Ann Kay and her mother asked Saint Joseph to save her brother; in return, she would build an altar in his honor. Within two months, the brother beat his sickness and turned around his life. Ever since then, the Saint Joseph Altar has been at our school and this year marks its fifteenth year.

Large numbers of students and parent volunteers assisted Logarbo throughout the weekend with preparation of the food and altar itself. Students visited the altar during their religion classes with opportunities to feast on the many desserts and other items that had been placed on the altar in honor of St. Joseph. At lunchtime, Logarbo, along with a strong contingency of mothers from the St. Paul's Mothers Club, offered a meal to every member of the student body and faculty, a welcome treat for most from the usual "iffy" cafeteria food. Delicious catfish, spaghetti, salad, and various pastas comprised most of the menu.

Before any feasting starts, however, the food is blessed. As tradition has it, if the food is not eaten, proper etiquette would require that a person buries it in the ground. Doctor Logarbo makes sure to adhere to these particular qualifications when organizing this awesome spectacle. Specifically labeled trash cans are used to collect the uneaten food and prepare it for burial.

Saint Paul's School graciously appreciates Doctor Logarbo's hard work as this day is a particular favorite in the hearts of the student body.

Mother Son Brunch

On March 16, Saint Paul's hosted the annual Mother-Son Brunch in the Briggs Assembly Center. The event is sponsored by the Mothers' Club, under the leadership of President Elizabeth Grashoff, who welcomed all the students and mothers. The afternoon began with a prayer service and the Liturgical Band provided the music. Following the service, everyone was served a delicious lunch of chicken, which was provided courtesy of Keith Young's Steakhouse. After everyone had finished their meal, Mother's Club President Elizabeth Grashoff introduced five pre-freshmen, who recited the short story "I'll Love You Forever," one of the hallmarks of the Mother-Son Brunch. Those students that read included Hayden Coutrado, Ashton van Deventer, Bradley Anzalone, Patrick Baldone, and Grant Hughes and Bryan Livaudais. Brother Ray then invited ten seniors to give reflections on their mothers. Seniors Eric Boudet, Michael Curry, David Davenport, Jordan Jacob, Andre' Marshall, Benny Miller, Handsome Monica, Justin Sciortino, Nick Sibley, and Paul Tilly each delivered humorous yet powerful reflections about the impact their mothers have had on them. The students and their mothers all seemed to enjoy the afternoon and the opportunity to spend some quality time with each other.

Christian Brothers' Relay

As evidenced by the retention of returning teams and the addition of De La Salle New Orleans as well as Archbishop Hannan, the Christian Brothers Relays continue to make great strides in terms of restoration to a hallmark event. The good Lord truly blessed us by allowing the inclement weather to bookend the event and give us just enough time to pull it off. The meet began with a Vigil mass incorporating a representative from each of the attending schools with Fr. Matthew Clark, OSB as the celebrant while our very own Christi and Pierre Simoneaux '82 provided the liturgical music. Several families from the visiting schools attended along with a contingent of our local Christian Brothers community. Coaches, athletes and fans alike continue to report how special it is to engage in such a mass which includes so many Catholic School student athletes from our greater Metropolitan area.

Equally as exciting as the fellowship was the performance of Saint Paul's Track and Field team. The meet results were as follows: Saint Paul's 168, Jesuit 109, Archbishop Rummel 104, St. Stanislaus 70.5, Holy Cross 62.5, De La Salle 25, St. Charles Catholic 11, and Archbishop Hannan 7.

It truly remains an honor and great source of pride for Saint Paul's to host this event. We are already looking forward to next year.

Iron Wolves

Despite being down four lifters, the Iron Wolves finished as state runner up in the LHSAA Powerlifting Championships. The Wolves had 3 individual state champions: Nick Gordon (114), Austin Grashoff (123), and Tucker Faust (275). Tucker also set the school record for totaling 1700 pounds on his 3 lifts. D.J. DiPol finished 2nd at 148lbs., and Yehia Elkersh and Warner Moore finished 3rd at 114 and 165, respectively. Finally, Brandon Eberts had a solid meet and finished 7th.
